who shot and killed James Montiglia, an artist and musician in Brooklyn, because he refused to marry her after her husband had east her aside, will use the un-written law as her defence in the trial which is now proceeding. Montiglia won the love of the woman whole she was posting with her 7 months old baby girl for a new painting of the Masionna and the child, it is said. When she fled to him for protection, her husband having discovered their relations, he

Difficulty was experienced in the selection of a jury, many of the men in the first panel saying flatly that they believed Montiglia "got what he deserved."

Mrs. Bellina shot Montiglia in his rooms, while she held her haby in her arms. Her husband is a wealthy Brooklyn contractor,
